Jamila is a specialist family and children law barrister, with particular emphasis on public and private children cases. She also accepts instructions on financial remedy and protective orders under the Family Law Act.

Jamila specialises in cases involving complex factual and legal issues which require a forensic evaluation. She is consequently in demand for cases involving serious allegations of harm, complex medical evidence and intractable hostility between parents and carers.

Jamila often represents clients who present with addiction, mental health issues or learning disabilities and works alongside interpreters and intermediaries with ease. Solicitors have noted Jamila's kind and sensitive approach whilst delivering pragmatic and robust representation.

Fluent in Swedish, Somali and Swahili, in addition to English, Jamila is often instructed in cases with cross-cultural and international dimensions.

Jamila also acts for grandparents and other relatives in applications under s. 10 CA 1989 for leave to apply for s. 8 orders.

In addition to her family law practice, Jamila has represented clients in complex cases across all areas of immigration law, including asylum, human rights and public law. Jamila is often instructed in cases that crossover between family law and immigration.

Jamila's expertise led to her appointment as Junior Counsel to the Grenfell Tower Inquiry.

Jamila is qualified to undertake direct access work for members of the public.
